Keynote Presentation

Assessment and the Learning Process

Katie Moirs, Ph.D.

Educator Preparation Program Approval Coordinator
Connecticut State Department of Education

May 24, 2011

10:30 am - 12:30 pm

Wahlstrom Library, 6th Floor

Katie Moirs holds a doctorate from the University of Iowa. Her areas of expertise include cognition and learning, assessment/measurement, and program evaluation. She has much experience in working with faculty in higher education throughout Connecticut in the areas of assessment and student learning.

Session Summary: This presentation will provide educators with a framework for establishing student learning targets and matching assessment methods with learning targets. Reliability and validity issues for each assessment method will be discussed, including the inherent measurement tradeoffs involved in what is typically thought of as being “traditional” assessment methods (e.g., selected response tests) versus performance-based assessment.

There will be a follow-up discussion session on this topic after lunch in the CELT Faculty Development classroom, Wahlstrom Library 5th Floor.
