Pediatric and Autism Clinic

At UB Clinics at the University of Bridgeport, Dr. Jared Skowron, a national expert in natural medicine for children, provides natural healthcare through nutrition, vitamins, homeopathy, and education about raising a healthy child. In January, 2010 he created the Pediatric & Autism Clinic in the UB Clinics and has since helped thousands of children by curing colds, asthma, eczema, stomach complains, ADHD, and other health conditions.

Natural Healthcare

Parents are always striving to do the best and give the most to their child, and healthcare is no option. Natural medicines are a healthy adjunct to your current medications for your child. Changes in diet, vitamins, herbs, and homeopathics are safe, natural remedies that help your child feel better and be healthier, which can be used with your current treatment. The physicians and students at UB Clinics work with your pediatrician to create the best healthcare plan for your child.

Integrated Pediatrics

The physicians and students at UB Clinics are the most highly trained specialists in the field of natural medicine. Looking at your child from a different point of view from your conventional pediatrician can help discover if diet, nutrient deficiencies, or toxins are adding or causing the symptoms in your child. Parents bring their children to UB Clinics for the most advanced natural evaluation for chronic medical concerns. Many families are looking for a natural option instead of pharmaceuticals, while other families have been down every road and are looking for an answer. Our natural therapies can be utilized with your current medications. UB Clinics is not an acute-care facility, and emergencies should be taken to the appropriate triage location.

Pediatric Conditions best treated by natural medicine...

- ADD/ADHD/Autism
- Mood concerns
- Skin problems
- Asthma
- Ear infections
- Stomach and bowel complaints
- Headaches/Migraines
- PMS/PMDD
